1757 - Daniel, born 22 Aug. 1757, baptized 27 March 1758 at Market Square Church (Presbyterian) at Germantown, Philadelphia Co., Pa. Sponsors were Daniel Jost and wife. Parents, Jacob and Maria Magdalena Ulm.

1762 - JACOB UHLUM. "Pennsylvania Naturalizations" - list certified by Joseph Shippen, Jr. Secretary, Philadelphia, 16 Nov. 1763, Page 3. Note that the above references from 1745-1757 came from German documents where the ministers, etc. were familiar with the spelling of the German name. This 1762 naturalization reference is the first non-German one to that date, found at this time. This is similar to other anglacized spellings found on family records and one of the most similar to the German spelling. We believe Jacob Uhlum is our Jacob Ulm. (Carl and Ada Behrend).

1764 - Page 4, Pennsylvania Archives, "Caveat Book" Volume 2, third series. "Land Office, March 6th, 1764", page 284 refers to a land warrant granted at the request of JACOB AHLM, Haycock Twnship., Bucks Co. When the capital U is made without the beginning loop, as was and is often done, it can easily be mistaken for a capital A. We believe the original record was spelled Uhlm and that a printing error was made. We have found the anglacized spelling Uhlm many times. We believe this item referd to our Jacob. (Carl and Ada Behrend).

1770 - German Reformed Church, Hagerstown, Md. (near Berkeley Co., Va. (Now W. The minister of the church added to the record that the witness JACOB ULM was not a member of the congregation.

THE ULLOM FAMILY

While browsing through some old records in the Berkeley County, West Virginia, Court House at Martinsburg, the author noticed a name that sounded familiar. The name was spelled "Woolam" and the record was the will of one Jacob Woolam, who made the paper on April 13, 1778, which was filed for probate on November 17, 1778. He named his wife Magdelina and the names of his children. (Will Book 1. pp. 150.)

PETER WOOLAM FAMILY

Two of the sons of Jacob Woolam and his wife, Magdelina, were living on the Tenmile in the 1790 Census, when the name is spelled Woolham. Other records spell the name Whoolam, Woolam, etc., but it eventually became Ullom by the spelling adopted in the family of Peter Ullom. On September 19, 1793, Peter Ullom (spelled then Woollom) bought 98 acres of land from Captain James Hook's purchase of "Hook's Delight." (Washington County Deed Book 1-I. pp. 765.) Here he resided until his death. His will was made January 29, 1816, and probated August 24, 1824. He gave his home farm to his widow, Margaret, after which it was to go to his six named sons. The indications are that Margaret died soon after her husband and on May 18, 1829, these sons sold out to Isaac Ullom. (Greene County Will Book 1. pp. 257.)

Family of Peter and Margaret Ullom

1. Peter Ullom, Jr., died about the same time as his father. His wife was Mary MILDA?. He left a number of minor children. (O. C. Docket 1. pp. 214 and O. C. Docket 2. pp. 36.)

18th Century

THE BEGINNING OF THE EASTERN PANHANDLE

"Old Berkeley"

By Keith E. Hammersla

"Damn the Capitulation", by John Buxton. It features an angry Adam Stephen scolding a French soldier, with George Washington discussing the situation with his own soldiers in the background. Adam Stephen's Scottish servant is holding Stephen's reclaimed possessions after the incident which occurred following the surrender of the American forces at the fort.

Washington, Fairfax, Hite, Morgan. These are a few of the early settlers in the Eastern Panhandle of Berkeley, Jefferson, and Morgan Counties of West Virginia. The easternmost part of what was to become West Virginia, this area was the state's first settled region. The earliest European settlers included Morgan Morgan (from Wales) who came from Delaware to settle on Mill Creek, Richard Morgan (of Welsh parentage) who came from New Jersey to settle near present-day Shepherdstown, and the early immigrants who crossed Pack Horse Ford on the Potomac River near Shepherdstown and settled there. After 1730, many settlers of German, English, Welsh, Dutch, and Scotch extractions came to the Shenandoah Valley. Early religious groups in the area included Presbyterians, Quakers, Lutherans, Episcopalians, and Baptists.

Until the nineteenth century, Jefferson and Morgan Counties were part of "old Berkeley" County. (Jefferson County was formed out of Berkeley County in 1801;

British Army uniform waistcoat worn by Adam Stephen when a Lieutentant Colonel during the French and Indian War, 1754–63.

Morgan County was formed from parts of Berkeley and Hampshire Counties in 1820.) The first town established by the Virginia Assembly in "old Berkeley" was originally chartered as Mecklenburg in 1762. In the following decades, the town was known as "Shepherd's Town" after its first trustee, Henry Shepherd. In 1798, the name was officially changed to Shepherdstown.

Prior to the Revolution, the Fairfax family were the most prominent landholders in this area. Title to the land came through their mother, Lady Culpeper, daughter of Lord Thomas Culpeper who had received the land grant from King Charles II of England in 1664. Through this birthright, Thomas, the 6th Lord Fairfax, became Proprietor of the Northern Neck of Virginia. The family's land ran from the Rappahannock River to the headwaters of the Potomac, where Preston, Tucker, and Grant Coun-ties of West Virginia now meet. Here the Fairfax stone was erected in 1746 to mark ownership of the land.

Lord Fairfax granted tracts of land to individuals for settlement. When families started moving into the Shenandoah Valley via the Philadelphia wagon road, many of them settled on the Fairfax land. Fairfax wanted to remove families who had settled on his land without his permission. Jost Hite and some of the other families, including the McKays and VanMeters, filed a lawsuit against Fairfax, noting that they had been encouraged by the Colony of Virginia to settle on the frontier as a buffer against Indian attacks.

During the French and Indian War (1756-1763), this area was part of Frederick County, Virginia, with Winchester being the county seat. There were many small forts in the region to protect against Indian raids. Some of these were Forts Mendenhall, Evans, Neally, Hedges and Maidstone in present-day Berkeley County, Forts Shepherd and Hite in present-day Jefferson County, and Forts Dawson and Sleepy Creek in present-day Morgan County.

Two men who stand out for their military leadership and protection of the Virginia frontier are George Washington and Adam Stephen. Stephen, a native of Scotland, settled in Fredericksburg, VA in 1748 where he practiced as a doctor. Sent to Winchester in 1754 on a military assignment, he raised an army of volunteers and was eventually second in command of the colonial troops. His uniform, the only one surviving from the French and Indian War, is now in the Smithsonian Institution.

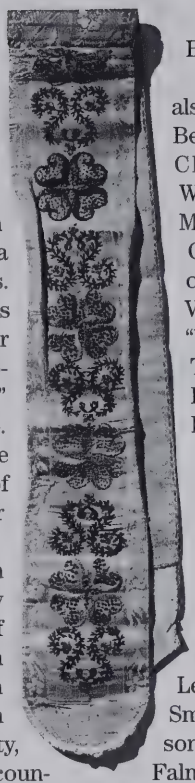
Stephen and Washington became political rivals, with Stephen even winning an election over Washington! Stephen made a political alliance with the Fairfaxes. They met socially and many times travelled to the Warm Springs, later known as "Berkeley Springs" established legally as the "Town of Bath" by the Virginia Assembly in 1776. Stephen acquired land on which he was to establish the town of Martinsburg and much of his other land from the Fairfax family.



In 1770, members of the Church of England in Frederick County petitioned for a division of Frederick Parish, which resulted in the creation of Norborne Parish in the north and Beckford Parish in the south. In 1772, Frederick County, Virginia, was divided into three counties. Berkeley County was formed from the northern section, and Dunmore (later Shenandoah) County was formed from the southern section of the county following the parish boundaries.

At the creation of Berkeley County, the town that was to become Martinsburg existed as a settlement along the Tuscarora Creek. Laid out on the Stephen's land, the town was named for Thomas Bryan Martin, nephew of Lord Fairfax. The selection of Martinsburg over Jacob Hite's proposal for his settlement as the county seat was influenced by the prior conflict between the Hites and Fairfaxes and by Stephen's acquaintance with the Fairfax family. Following his dismissal from the army in 1777, Adam Stephen continued to sell lots and pressed to have his town incorporated by the Virginia Assembly as Martinsburg. Stephen was largely responsible for the formation of Berkeley County, named for Norborne Berkeley, Baron de Botetourt, in 1772.

Five Revolutionary War generals resided in what was then Berkeley County—Adam Stephen, Charles Lee, Horatio Gates, William Darke, and Daniel Morgan. Morgan moved out of Berkeley County just prior to the outbreak of the war and is known for his Virginia Riflemen who made a "beeline march" to Boston in 1775. The village of Bucklestown in Berkeley County was renamed Darkesville in honor of General Darke who was taken prisoner at the Battle of Germantown and exchanged in 1780.

Many other villages existed in the tri-county area within the boundaries of "Old Berkeley" during the late 1700s, including: Mecklenburg, Harper's Ferry, Leetown, Charles Town, and Smithfield in present-day Jefferson County; Hedgesville, New Falmouth, Mill Creek, Bucklestown, Middletown , and Jamesburgh in present-day Berkeley County; and Bath in present-day Morgan County. Most of these are shown on the 1809 map of Frederick, Berkeley, and Jefferson Counties drawn by Charles Varie.

By the end of the eighteenth century, with the increasing populations of the towns and the distances between them, Berkeley County suffered from the same situation as Frederick County thirty years earlier. In 1801, Jefferson County was created from the eastern portion of Berkeley and was named for the new President, Thomas Jefferson. In 1820, the western part of Berkeley and a small portion of Hampshire County were combined to form Morgan County, named after Revolutionary General Daniel Morgan. The boundaries of these counties remained unchanged until the state boundaries changed when the new state of West Virginia was born out of the Civil War.

THE EARLY DAYS OF BATH

The Beginning of Berkeley Springs

By Jeanne Mozier

The warm mineral waters of Berkeley Springs were already known throughout the colonies for their curative value when 16-year-old George Washington came in 1748 to survey the frontier region for Lord Fairfax. In those early years, visitors like Washington found conditions primitive at the most ancient watering place in the Valley of Virginia. A large hollow scooped in the sand, surrounded by a screen of woven brush, was the only bathing-house. There were a few private cottages and small boarding houses for visitors, but most encamped on nearby hills bringing their own servants and provisions in covered wagons. Local mountain settlers provided milk, butter, eggs, fowl and wild game.

During the final half of the 18th century, the settlement around the springs grew from a little bush village to a fashionable watering spot with such riotous amusements that it was branded a seat of sin. In 1776, George Washington and his family and friends established the Town of Bath and set their sights on making it the country's first spa. That same year, America's first Methodist bishop, Francis Asbury, was horrified by Bath's "overflowing tide of immorality."

In addition to "taking the waters" several times a day, by cup and in baths, regular visitors for the summer season gambled at cards, raced horses in the streets and danced at twice-weekly balls. In these early years, the bathing facilities were used by both men and women but at separate times.

In 1784, stone pools in natural terrain were replaced by the first formal bath house. Newspapers and travelers of the time recorded five bathing-houses with dressing rooms, a large bath for swimming and a bath for poor people in three separate buildings located in Bath Square. Three years later, a New England man counted 172 houses, an assembly and tea room, and several taverns.

The nine-room brick Roman Bath House, built in 1815 on the same spot as the original individual bathing-house, has been modified and replumbed, offering modern visitors the opportunity to reenact history each time they bathe. It is operated today as part of Berkeley Springs State Park.

A detailed sketch of life 200 years ago at the spa was provided by French traveler Ferdinand Bayard in the summer of 1791. After enduring four days of "abominable roads," poor taverns and primitive meals of eggs, ham, chicken and potatoes, the 23-year-old Bayard arrived in Bath from Paris via Baltimore.

"Bath has two public buildings," he wrote, "the theater and the bath house." The structure he described as the bath house was "a plain and large frame structure, divided into eight small rooms made of badly joined boards where the bather wishes he can gradually change the water line."

Although he reported the water tasted tepid and insipid, Bayard praised its effects. "I saw several suffering with rheumatism who, carried at first to the baths and to the spring, walked there alone at the end of three weeks, with the aid of crutches."

The park area around the springs also drew comment from Bayard who described a "grotto with benches for those who love to chat." Bayard reported a variety of summer amusements including young women from Virginia racing horses, boats heading downriver to Georgetown loaded with grain, gambling at faro, strolling Irish players and market-day fights with a Bruiser as referee.

Bayard lodged for the summer season with Mrs. Throgmorton, a relative of George Washington and partner in an inn with James Rumsey (see related article page 41) seven years earlier. He shared the inn with about 40 others whom Mrs. Throgmorton, "fed well," according to Bayard.

One of Bayard's most entrancing vignettes centered on the social practice of five o'clock tea parties while at the springs. He described the circle of ladies, decked out in their finest, pouring from silver pots. There were "round slices of buttered bread and slices of smoked-cured meats presented to each person." Although tea-time was silent, it was followed by entertainment. Bayard reported on the performance of a "wag, a Mr. West, who gagged rather well," and the singing of "Miss Lee, the virtuoso of Bath." The young songtress so impressed Bayard that he recorded the words for all four verses of her favorite song, "the Kiss."

By the close of the 18th century, Bath was reputedly America's premier spa, prescribed by noted physicians and visited by rich Virginia planters and merchants. Cure seekers in the mountain town were often outnumbered by gamblers, confidence men, troupes of actors, mothers seeking to marry off daughters and bachelors looking over the prospects. The powdered hair and linen shirt society may have come each summer to take the waters but it was the partying in an unrestrained frontier spa that made their season at Bath.

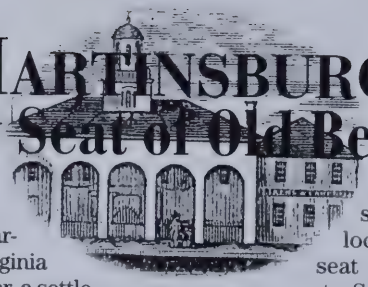
MARTINSBURG: County Seat of Old Berkeley



By Keith E. Hammersla

Martinsburg was chartered by the Virginia Assembly in 1778. However, a settlement existed along the Tuscarora Creek there much earlier. An early map of the area drawn in conjunction with a survey for the adjacent Mendenhall property (circa 1750-60) shows the Widow Morgan, wife of the late Morgan Morgan who had come from Pennsylvania (not the same Morgan Morgan who settled on Mill Creek) and H. (Hanowell) Edwards with dwellings situated along the creek near the present location of the town. Morgan had been granted the land by Lord Fairfax in 1754. The Edwards property was purchased from Edwards as "waste and ungranted land" by George William Fairfax, who simultaneously received a grant from Lord Fairfax for the land in 1752.

Previous to the establishment of Berkeley County in 1772, Adam Stephen had chosen this location as the site where he would develop his industries due to the intersection of the famous north-to-south "Wagon Road" (Route 11) and the "Alexandria-to-Warm Springs Road" (Route 9) in that vicinity. The crossing of the roads made it a desirable location for business since many people travelled along these roads and some would even settle there. Stephen purchased his first tract of land from the Widow Morgan in 1770.

As Jacob Hite was suggesting the present location of Leetown as the seat for the proposed new county, Stephen knew he must do something to protect the future possibilities for his business investments along the Tuscarora Creek. In 1773, he acquired a second tract of 563 acres of land from George William Fairfax adjoining his previous purchase of land from the Widow Morgan. It was on these two large tracts of land that Adam Stephen laid out a town for which he began selling lots, with the condition that the lot-owners would build a certain size house within a certain number of years. He petitioned the Virginia Assembly for his town to be chosen as the county seat. Stephen's town was chosen due to its centralized location in the newly-formed county.

The new county court began meeting in this location called at first "Berkeley Courthouse." The town was later named for Adam Stephen's friend, Thomas Bryan Martin, who was a nephew of Thomas, Lord Fairfax. The town became known as Martinsburg prior to 1778, but exactly-when cannot be ascertained. An actual courthouse building was erected between 1773 and 1779. A sketch of the colonial-style building was included in Henry Howe's Historical Collections of Virginia, published in 1845, with the caption "Central View in Martinsburg."
